JOHN L. SULLIVAN, "HERO" OF THE "SQUARED CIRCLE," IS LAID TO REST

Boston, Feb. 6.—Final tribute to a great champion was paid today when the body of John L. Sullivan was buried in Calvary cemetery. In the streets that lined the snow-belted streets as the casket was borne from the home of Sullivan's sister, Mrs. Annie Lennon, in the Roxbury district, to St. Paul's church, where the funeral mass was celebrated, were scores of children, bidding farewell to their big "pal." For them the tales of his prize ring days were legends. They remembered him best as their big "pal," whose watchword was courage and who regaled them with stories of kings and presidents he had met.

At the funeral mass were men and women from every walk of life. Sullivan virtually had been out of sporting life ever since James J. Corbett won the American heavyweight championship-ship from him by a knockout in New Orleans in 1882, and the honor paid his memory today came from walks far removed from the "squared circle."

Leaders of the temperance movement were there to testify to their regard for the man who boasted that his greatest victory was gained when he conquered drink. Many were there also whom the former champion had helped in their hours of need, while, unmindful of the bitter cold and demoralized transportation, neighbors who had watched Sullivan in ti down to country life journeyed from his former home in Abington, where he died suddenly of heart disease last Saturday. Nor did the sporting fraternity forget their once great idol, and they came in numbers from far and near.

The burial was in Calvary, at Forest Hills, beside the body of Sullivan's wife.

PARIS-SAYLOR FIGHT
DRAWS MUCH INTEREST

The Milburn Saylor-Kid Paris bout billed for tonight at the Union Athletic club, corner of Ninth street and Georgia avenue promises to be the best scrap the local promoter has ever staged.

Since the four-round bout a few weeks ago between these nervy scrappers, a constant stream of requests for a return engagement has been pouring in on the promoter.

Tonight the melee is scheduled for eight rounds, and fight fans are looking forward to the best exhibition they have ever witnessed here.

Both men are in the pink of condition and feel confident of victory, which means that the man who wins tonight will most likely be signed up for a battle with Ted Lewis, the welterweight champion.

The curtain-raiser will be between Johnnie Janates and Rolfe Boze, a couple of young lads who have the making of fast fighters.

The Frank Humphrey-Kid Johnston scrap in the semi-wind-up will doubtless be as good a bout as one would care to see in a six-round mix-up.

Earl Wester will referee.

ALEXANDER WANTS NEAT $22,000 FOR SEASON

Chicago, Feb. 6.—Grover Alexander, who, with his battery mate, Bill Kilfer, cost the Chicago Nationals $50,000, today declared that if he plays with the Chicago team next season he must be paid a salary of $12,000 a year and a bonus of $10,000 for signing. Alexander, who some time ago became a hold-out, stopped off here on his way from Nebraska to Philadelphia. He denied that he and President Weeghman had ever reached an agreement concerning a bonus or terms for next season.

Alexander said he had heard nothing of his claim for exemption from the draft and said he would not press the claim. He said that when he was examined a notation was made of the fact that he had flat feet and a weak knee, but did not know whether these defects would bar him from army duty.

MATTY MAY SECURE MARQUARD FOR REDS

Chicago, Feb. 6.—Rube Marquard may play with Christy Mathewson's Reds next year. Matty is said to be angling for the Rube's services, and as Marquard is not satisfied with the terms offered him by the Dodgers, Christy may be able to make some sort of a deal.

OVERHEATED FURNACE CAUSES WATER FRONT FIRE

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Feb. 6.—The wharves and warehouses of the Central Hudson Steamboat company and the J. W. Matthews & Co.'s wholesale grocery warehouse on the water front at Newburgh were destroyed and several other nearby warehouses were damaged today in a fire supposed to have started from an overheated furnace in the steamboat warehouse. The loss is estimated at $500,000.

JOHN L. AS HIS FRIEND KNEW HIM

Arthur Brisbane, Who Knew

Prizefighter Well, Reviews

His Experiences.

This writer, says Arthur Brisbane in a recent review of the life of John L. Sullivan, knew Sullivan more than thirty years ago, saw him fight in New York, in London and on Baron Rothschild's training farm near Chantilly in France—the last fight in the open air on the turf, London prize ring rules, with bare knuckles.

The men fought with one minute rest between knockdowns. Each round lasted until one man went down. It was an interesting display of the brutal gentleman's sport. The worst criminal in England were at the ringside, standing in the corner of Mitchell, the English fighter. They had announced that Sullivan would not be allowed to win.

In Sullivan's corner stood a respectable looking man in a stovepipe hat, with a handsome heavy blue coat, velvet collar. He had both hands in his overcoat pockets, spoke very quietly and said to Billy Moore, Mitchell's father-in-law, "I suppose you know what I've got here in each hand—telling the barrels of two revolvers. 'Tell the Manchester men not to take any chances on me.' Which meant that he would kill anybody interfering with his notions of fair play."

Nobody did interfere with them. The man was Billy Porter, the bank burglar, one of the most dangerous and murderous of American criminals. He took a fortune from one New York City bank, killed at least two policemen and died a prisoner working in a German salt mine—caught in a big burglary.

Fighting with bare fists, on the slippery turf, naked to the waist in bitter winter weather, or fighting indoors with gloves, Sullivan fought in only one way.

He walked up to his man at the start and kept walking at him to the finish—and the other man, while Sullivan was Sullivan, always walked away, or ran.

It never occurred to Sullivan that any man could beat him. And no man could—only whisky, and it took whisky many years.

He beat his man ordinarily with a look. He sat in his corner waiting for the signal absolutely indifferent. It was plain to be seen in his light gray, wavy eye that he wondered sincerely why anybody had been fool enough to get in the ring with him. He would look viciously at his man, then look away, and shake hands without looking at the other man's face. As he dropped the man's hand he would shoot out his left, walk forward and swing his right—always forward. This writer saw him fight four or five times, and never saw him take a step backward.

Mike Donovan fought Sullivan in Boston. Donovan was champion middleweight and matched to fight Billy Edwards for $5,000.

"The Boston men had been told to pick out a chopping block for me to show what I could do. The chopping block turned out to be a young hack driver not 20 years old named John L. Sullivan," said Donovan, the man who spars with Roosevelt. "I did not like the look of him and said, 'Young fellow, wicked matched for $5,000 and I wouldn't break that little finger on you for a good deal. Don't get gay and when you come to New York I'll teach you something about fighting.'"

Sullivan's reply was, "If you get in that ring with me you'll be lucky if I don't break your neck."

"And I was lucky," said Donovan. "Sullivan knew nothing about boxing, but he was the most savage fighter and hardest hitter I ever lived. There's no use talking about anyone else when you talk of Sullivan. Do you see that broken nose? Young Sullivan did that. He swung his arm. I stepped in. He hit me on the back, using his arm as a club in a down stroke, knocked me on my face and broke my nose on the floor."

On another youthful occasion, while still a hack-driving fighter, Sullivan was to fight a big, powerful, well-known professional from another city. The professional took one look at Sullivan, then went off and got drunk. When the manager apologized and explained there was hissing, Sullivan walked to the footlights. "My name's John L. Sullivan, and I can kick any man in the house."
